1914-1916 ROTARY COIL ISSUE

COIL SINGLES

By 1914 demand for coil stamps had increased to the point where the Post Office Dept. began to examine alternative, less labor-intensive printing methods. Increased plate size eventually gave way to the new Stickney rotary press, named for its inventor who worked at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

The rotary press was able to print using paper in long rolls, with plates wrapped around a cylinder. The machine also gummed stamps. This was ideal for coil production, as pasting sheets together was no longer necessary. Unlike flat plate printings, which had a guide line every 20 stamps, the rotary press stamps had a joint line every 20 stamps, where the two ends of the curved plate meet.

Scott 482A is the first Type Ia stamp to be issued (the second is Scott 500). It was issued imperforate, but like Scott 314A it is only known with Schermack Type III perforations.

Scott 485 is an error of color, caused when a 5c transfer roll was mistakenly used and three 5c subjects were entered on a plate of 2c stamps. The error was not noticed until the plate had been in use for some time. The 5c Rose and Carmine errors exist as Perf 10 (Scott 467), Imperforate and Perf 11 (Scott 505).

1922-1925 ISSUE

Perforated 11, Flat Plate, Unwatermarked

After Harding's election in 1921 Will Hays, chairman of the Republican National Committee, was appointed Postmaster General. The Washington-Franklin series, which had intentionally been produced with uniform designs since 1908, came to an end with the 1922 Issue.

Stamps in 25 denominations were eventually issued, including some depicting items of national interest such as the Golden Gate, Lincoln Memorial and the Capitol. They were released over time rather than all at once, most on dates of historical significance relating to their subject.

Like the Washington-Franklin Issue, the 1922-25 Issue provides an array of different perforating and printing varieties, many of which relate to difficulties in production.
